Oct. 12: Petite Maman

While visiting her mother's childhood home, eight-year-old Nelly (Joséphine Sanz) develops a unique friendship with Marion (real-life sister Gabrielle Sanz) while exploring the surrounding woods. But all is not what it seems. A surprising discovery imbues the film's quiet poetry – and the girls' deep yearning for connection and understanding – with a cosmic grandeur. Petite Maman is an evocative and beautiful testament to empathy in film.

Oct. 26: Official Competition

Directors: Mariano Cohn, Gastón Duprat

Spain/Argentina 2021; Spanish; 115 minutes

When a millionaire decides to finance a great work of cinema, he buys the rights to a Nobel Prize-winning novel and hires Lola Cuevas (Penélope Cruz) as director. She casts two actors who couldn't be less alike: Iván Torres (Oscar Martínez), a legend of the stage with high ideals, and Félix Rivero (Antonio Banderas), a global star consumed by his own celebrity. Awash in egomania and absurd hijinks, Official Competition is an ingenious satire of Hollywood.
